

Passing Around by Kevan Myers (1st place)

A careless World traveller, called Grace,
Once dared all her friends to a race,
Then hitched on a plane,
Full of Covid's new strain,
And spread it all over the place.

Eco-nomy flight by Jan Halstead (2nd place)

A vegany type from East Harrow
Tried circling the globe on a marrow.
He said, "I won't lie.
It's too heavy to fly,
So I've hooked myself up to a sparrow."

Bird Brain by Sarah Sansbury (3rd place)

An ornithological ace,
Though hide-bound, sat dreaming of space:
"Oh, to circle the planet
On the back of a gannet,
With swooping, ethereal grace!"

Grounded by Ruth Goldstraw (Specially commended)

There was an old lady who travelled
From country to country untrammelled
When a bug from a bat
Put paid to all that,
Her life as a nomad unravelled.
